Impact What is the expected impact on scholarship, achievement, learning, or growth? Examples of high impact include: numbers of students; benefits in perpetuity (versus 1-time); a targeted population (gifted, special education, economically disadvantaged); an area outside of the core curriculum that historically has access to limited funding (e.g., arts, music, languages); an area demonstrated to be particularly critical to long-term student success.		(of 10)
Justification/Benefit Is a strong case made for the proposed funding in terms of need? Is the proposed funding likely to lead to clear, understandable and measurable benefits to students? Have similar past awards resulted in significant student benefit? Are budget details adequate to assess actual spending, and are they consistent with the description?		(of 15)
Overall quality Is the overall proposal clear in describing scope and expected outcomes? Does it have appropriate justification, and sufficient detail throughout the proposal? If similar awards were made in the past, is the outcome from that funding carefully described?		(of 15)
